

Aviation Services Manager

Salary $60,000 - $75,000

MRRRA, the entity charged with redeveloping Naval Air Station Brunswick, is seeking a highly motivated, experienced and team oriented individual to fill the position of Aviation Services Manager. This is a professional level position performing work of significant responsibility developing the former naval aviation facility into a civilian airport.

The Aviation Services Manager will work as part of the redevelopment team and be the key point of contact on FAA issues and provide property and facility management oversight and deal with specialized airport problems as they relate to the region, community, tenants, and other government agencies.

Primary duties will include all of the startup activities with a new civilian airport including working with the Executive Director on the public benefit conveyance transfer from the FAA to MRRRA, organizing and managing air shows and special events, working to see that the airport becomes a public airport and included in the National Plan of Integrated Airport Systems (NPIAS).

The position will be open until filled. A more detailed position description can be found on MRRRA's website: www.mrra.us. Send cover letter and resume to:
